MILLENNIAL

CHARLES T. RUSSELL SAYS TIME IS RIPE FOR RESURRECTION.

Says Ecclesiastical and Civic Government Will Be Superseded by Divine Law and Love.

The Rev. Charles T. Russell, of Allegheny. Pa., author of "Millennial Dawn." dressed an audience in Mansur Hall yesterday afternoon upon his millennial doctrine. His subject was "Resurrection," taken from the fifth chapter of John and the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth verses, which read: "Marvel not at this, for the unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of camnation.' Mr. Russell's theory leads up to a great co-operative plan of living under divine clesiastical forms of government have been sequently succeeded by the ideal which he terms the "millennial age." The dawndisturbed conditions over the entire world. the spirit of war that prevails, the revolting against present forms of government and denial of individual rights, and the organizations of capital and labor to guard and promote their respective interests. He said present economic conditions point to a pending revolution, and after a darkened period of anarchy the resurrection will come, the good will be weeded out from the bad, the transformation will have been accomplished and the righteous will be left to enjoy the glories of the millennial age, while the wicked and unde-serving will be destroyed. Time was divided into 1,000-year days by Dr. Russell, 1,000 years being a day in God's calendar. The age that is just closing, he said, is the Christian age and is now overlapping the millennial. The resurrection he described as the judgment when the wicked are separated from the righteous. He held that there is no immortality of the soul, that if it was immortal there would be no resurrection, but instead, there is death, or eternal oblivion. The pains of the body and all humane weaknesses, he said, are a part of death. The meaning of resurrection he defined as an awakening and the restitution of all that God has promised, but that this condition would be merging from the Christian age into the millennial. His views are the most optimistic regarding the after life. H holds that the kingdom of Christ will be here on earth in the millennial age, and those who enjoy it will be the survivors after judgment has been passed in the resurrection. He says death is a reality and that it comes to all. When the dead are resurrected, he says, the followers of Christ will be set apart from the others and gathered into His kingdom, and the sinners will receive a second death or be totally blotted out.

Mr. Russell represents a church that has no orthodox creed, ritual or discipline The doctrine is widespread, although there is little said about it, and is represented by societies in most of the cities of the United States and England. They have no organization, and it is difficult to get at their numerical standing, but three-quarters of a million copies of Dr. Russell's book have been sold, principally among the English-speaking people. Mr. Russell receives no salary for his work, but, on the contrary, has put many thousands of dollars of his own money into the cause. The ministers also serve without compensation and no collection is ever taken at the meetings. The local society is nown as "Millennial Dawn Church," and has about sixty members. Services are held in the Mansur Hall every Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The Rev. C. A. Owen is paster, and has served in the capacity for several years. The movement in Indianapclis is about eleven years old.

It was really the first Sunday of the spring in which people could go about the streets clad in their spring raiment without courting pneumonia. From the early hours of the day until late the streets were crowded. People on their way to the early church services were gayly dressed and others were taking advantage of the bright sunshine by riding about in buggles and other vehicles. About the middle of the day the sun's rays became so much like those in the months of July and August that many were forced to confine their promenading to the shady side of the street, where a cool breeze comforted them. Omega Oil

Great is Oil! Did you ever think what an important thing oil is in this world? It is the oil in paint that prevents decay of woodwork. It is the oil the bootblack puts on your shoes that preserves the leather. It is oil that keeps iron and steel from rusting. It is oil that makes machinery run easily and smoothly. But the greatest oil of all is Omega Oil, the popular green-colored liniment that everybody is talking about. It keeps the human body from decaying and getting rusty. It softens, relaxes, soothes and preserves the flesh of old people. It lubricates stiff joints, and makes them work easily and smoothly. And the little Swiss green herb in Omega Oil is the most amazing thing for stopping pains and aches that ever grew out of Old Mother Earth, If you have a place on your body that hurts, you are mighty foolish if youdon't rubthat place with Omega Oil, and get cured right away. It is good for everything a liniment ought to be good for. Tell your druggist you must have Omega Oil and nothing else. He will give it to you or get it for you. The audience was most pleased by his reminiscences of Mrs. Eddy herself. appears that the story leaked out that Mrs. Eddy, in great pain from an aching tooth, went to a Concord dentist and had it puiled. People are unkind enough to say that she had taken laughing gas. Thereupon the dentist signed an afficiavit that he used only his own "painless method," and Mrs. Eddy came out with a statement to the effect that, even if gas were used, it was her mind working on the dentist's, which worked on the gas, which worked on the tooth, that made the operation painless. He read a passage in which Mrs. Eddy says that exercise has nothing to do with strength, because the triphammer gets no muscle from working and the blacksmith does.
